AREAS OF CONCENTRATION

Business litigation
Workers' Compensation
Employment law
Construction litigation
Personal Injury claims

Paul prides himself on providing quality, personal representation with an eye towards the economic realities of litigation. Whether it is a small matter or complex business litigation, Paul is prepared to effectively litigate your case to obtain a successful negotiated resolution or, if necessary, take the case all the way to a jury verdict. Paul has successfully tried numerous jury cases in both federal and state court. He also represents clients in arbitration proceedings throughout western North Carolina.

Paul joined the firm in 1993 and has concentrated in litigation since joining the firm. His civil litigation practice includes business litigation, workers' compensation law, employment law, construction law, personal-injury law, and general civil litigation. When not practicing law, Paul enjoys spending time with his family, exercising, fishing, and working in the yard.
